Foundation SecurITy Overview

Foundation SecurITy is a forensic service provided in partnership with Thamesbridge, and can be provided where it is necessary to undertake a forensic investigation of a computer whereby data is examined for any material relating to a disciplinary act, criminal act or crime.

With Foundation SecurITy services, we are able to acquire an exact image, analyse and then present computer data so that it can be used as evidence in a disciplinary case or in a court of law.

Data Acquisition

With Foundation SecurITy services, we are able to perform computer image acquisition both at the clients premises using our portable evidence recovery equipment and also back in our lab. (This can be done either within or outside of standard office hours).

As with any evidence it is vital that nothing is changed, and all information on the computer remains in its original state. The recovery of data is hampered by the fact that even switching the computer on could risk altering the evidence.

Foundation SecurITy overcomes this by utilising specialist forensic equipment that seizes data quickly, accurately and completely, in its original state and in its entirety.

Data Analysis

Data is acquired and analysed using EnCase, which is an industry standard and accepted in a court or law as evidence.

This captured image contains all operating system and application software, configuration and all files (including deleted, hidden, encrypted and password protected data)

We are thus able to investigate the image, isolating any relevant information, without any risk of compromising the original computer evidence.

We are able to view this image onto a specialist forensic workstation and analyse the complete copy of the original system, without any reference to the original system.

Data Presentation

We then offer a clear presentation of meticulously documented evidence, which is fully auditable so that events can be recreated and in accordance with the ACPO guidelines (Association of Chief Police Officers)
